SWEETHEART THE TRUE.

I dream I tread upon a path
 Which might lead to a sunny bath,
 By dark green banks and smiling stream,
 All glorious in its beauty, home,
 Winding afar through winding shade
 Of woven branches, thick leaved arcade,
 Its soft moss borders flower dimmed
 In flecking light by clouds never dimmed—
 A wondrous scene, but part unfair'd
 The big rose garden of the world.
 Ah, fair! So fair, it can but seem
 To pilgrims in a deep, deep dream
 The vision when in life's young days
 Enthusiasm spreads a haze
 By which a color fine is wrought—
 Upon each bloom ambition sought,
 A vision still to him who walks
 His farther end, past lifeless stalks.
 The traveler who the best can tell
 That in mirage ideals dwell—
 That for all buds that he has found
 Ashes of roses strew the ground.
 Then each will fade!

No—one is true
 To cheer when every roseate hue
 Has vanished in the gleamy gray,
 And all bright visions flee away.
 Sweetheart the true, the fairer grown—
 Fairest that you are true alone.
 —Womankind.

HOW TO CLEAN STEEL.

Also to Remove Rust and Get a Good Polish.

If the steel is only tarnished, almost the best thing to apply is rottenstone and soap; it should be laid on with a soft flannel quickly and firmly, and immediately be polished with a leather; but if there are any signs of rust on the articles, try the following: Dissolve one-fourth of an ounce of camphor in nearly half a pound of lard; when the latter is quite melted carefully remove all the scum, and when nearly cold and set, mix with the lard as much black lead as will give it a rich iron color. Rub the ornaments with this mixture and leave them for 24 hours. Polish them with an old linen rag and a soft brush that will go into the crevices. If all the fenders, etc., were rubbed every other day with a leather, and once a fortnight with a paste, there would never be any reason for spending much time over them. This applies to brass, which looks so remarkably well when it is cared for, and so objectionable if allowed to remain tarnished. Lemon juice, putz pomade, etc., are good occasional remedies, but the leather frequently used is the best in the long run.

How to Remove Stains From Marble.

Every housekeeper knows the stains which will come on marble washbasins and the trouble to which she has gone in vain efforts to remove them. Sometimes lemon juice will take them off. Again ammonia may be applied with good effect.

If this will not move them, a little sponge may be firmly attached to a small stick and then dipped in hydrochloric acid, with which the stain should be rubbed. As soon as it shows signs of yielding the marble should be covered with water and all the wet, both acid and water, rubbed off with another and larger sponge.

This may be repeated, if necessary, but the acid should not be allowed to remain long on the marble. To restore the lost polish afterward, make a paste with water of oxide of tin and apply with a soft cloth.

How to Manicure Your Own Nails.

A woman is judged by her nails, as a man's standing and profession are known by his hat. Of course a young woman from any of the manicure establishments will do your nails for the consideration of $1, but if you consider this too expensive, or find it inconvenient to send for her always, you can attend to your own nails just as well, and with an outlay of $2.50 have enough powder, emery, and orange sticks to last for a long time.

The fingers should be held for ten minutes in hot water in which a small mixture of rosewater and grated soap has been poured, then dried carefully, and the cuticle pushed back, never cut, until the half moon at the bottom of the nail, which is considered quite a work of beauty, is exposed.

The nails are then shaped, points being considered by the ultra critical very bad taste. The oval shape reigns supreme.

A bit of powder is applied, then the pink paste, more powder, and the first polisher is used. A very exaggerated polish is not desirable. After the hands are well washed the second polisher, which must not be touched with the powder, is used. If there are any stains under the nails, they may be removed by tying a bit of cotton on the orange stick and moistening it with emery.
